

What we do...

Love Dolphins Research...

The Dolphin Survey Project was established at Cambridge University with Professor Sir Richard Harrison to monitor dolphin populations worldwide. IDW facilitates data input from a wide variety of professional and amateur dolphin watchers around the world. IDW co-operates with organisations monitoring cetacean populations in the North Sea and introducing people to observational and recording procedures. All research by International Dolphin Watch is non-intrusive. No research is conducted with captive dolphins. We do not approve of keeping dolphins in captivity.

Love Dolphins Conservation...

IDW actively lobbies governments worldwide – pressing for laws to be upheld where they are infringed and urging for changes in legislation that will help to save dolphins and protect the marine environment.

Love Dolphins Education...

IDW is actively involved in education and produces an Education pack. IDEAL (Integrated Dolphin Education and Learning) is based on a fictional dolphin named Dilo who fires the imagination and makes learning joyful for teachers, parents and children – including those with special educational needs.

Love Dolphins Dolphin Watching Guidelines...

IDW advocates guidelines on how to behave in the presence of dolphins for boat users and those who want to watch or swim with dolphins.

Love Dolphins Strandings...

IDW has friendly links with organisations with whom it collaborates in the rescue and treatment of stranded and injured marine mammals.

Love Dolphins Native Wisdom...

IDW is forging links with indigenous peoples, such as the Australian Aborigines, to find ways of applying their ancient wisdom and understanding of the natural world to help solve present ecological problems.

Love Dolphins Dolphin Healing...

IDW is researching dolphin healing and investigating ways in which the benefits of swimming with wild dolphins can be recreated artificially.

Love Dolphins Dolphin Shop...

IDW has a mail order shop, which stocks a range of books and dolphin goodies. Details on the website.

Love Dolphins Co-operation...

IDW has a policy of co-operating, not competing, with other conservation organisations that strive to help dolphins.

News and Updates

*Friends of International Dolphin Watch receive news items and information via monthly email newsletters.

Website:

The hub of IDW is the website which is constantly reviewed and carries information on IDW's many activities.

Friends of IDW can use the website to share their stories about their personal dolphin experiences, projects and fundraising events.

One of the website's most popular features is its World Wide Guide on where you can meet dolphins and possibly swim with them. www.dolphinfriend.com

Friends of IDW become part of a global network of dolphin devotees who want to help dolphins and share their enthusiasm with others.

IDW is totally dependant on gifts and donations.
Without Friends it cannot survive.
